

A Spanish paper published in N.Y. by a royalist called the Redactor has written expressed himself <sup>very</sup> <sup>Apr 28th May 5th</sup> very liberally on the subject while the native press have done acted very differently. I fear what he has said has never been translated in any 4 published. I wish you would communicate to him my intelligence you receive and what he may propose to do in the future of the paper.

I send you ~~some~~ the gazette of 16 July in which the Redactors editorial articles are republished it is worth reading and has been much admired here.

In one place he says "if the Falkland Islands had belonged to England France or Prussia, and Gov<sup>r</sup> V. had been pleased there by either of these, would the Capt Duncan have acted in the same manner, if even the supposed injuries had been one hundred times greater?
Certainly not" he then says "the language of Sweden under that of Despotism with the advantage that the latter are less hypocritical than the former and the only difference we find between their time and that of the middle ages is that in

In one part he says "why do not the papers of the nation (U.S.) say with republican
